

Places to Submit Videos

Don't stop at YouTube! Here are ten top places to submit your cleaning videos.

On each site, make sure you provide a link to your website. It's all about the links that promote your website.

<http://www.Youtube.com> This should come as no surprise. It's owned by Google. And this should be one of the first places you submit a video. YouTube allow videos up to 10 minutes long.

<http://www.Metacafe.com> A community based video sharing website. One of the reasons they are highly ranked is because they have duplicate video filter so two videos can't be the same. This is another great place to post cleaning videos.

<http://www.Viddler.com> Another one of my favs. The great thing about Viddler is they don't limit the length of the video. As long as your video is under 500MB, you're set.

<http://www.Break.com> Humor website that features comedy videos, games, and pictures. If you've got a cleaning video with a small amount of humor, post it here.

<http://www.Dailymotion.com> Allows users to search videos by tags, channels, and user created groups. In April 2009, Dailymotion was getting 55 million unique visitors per month.

<http://www.Revver.com> The site attaches advertising to submitted videos and shares revenue with the creators. This is part of what makes it a great video site.

<http://www.Vimeo.com> Budding videographers showcase their videos. Allows embedding, sharing, and user comments.

<http://www.Stickam.com> Free live video broadcasting/streaming and social networking site. They claim to be the Pioneers in live video streaming.

<http://www.Vidilife.com> Social networking and media sharing site. Users post videos and interact with other users. They also offer features like video mail where you send can send a video email.

<http://www.Blip.tv> Video share site that sharing ad venues with producers. They have a free and paid version. Submit videos that are “How to” only and not a blatant pitch for your company.
